WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

*** MARGINAL HIGH RISK Far Eastside this afternoon for gusty SW to W wind/low relative humidity (RH) ***

*** Fairly widespread gusty W to NW afternoon winds Thursday***

*** HIGH RISK FRI AND SAT Sacramento Valley/Foothills for moderately strong, gusty N wind/low RH ***

Periods of gusty winds, hot temperatures and low humidity will occur through this weekend across the North Ops region as the weather pattern remains a bit unsettled with passing troughs and strengthening high pressure in between.

Today will see some gusty SW to W afternoon winds (gusts 20-30 mph) with RH 15% or less develop over the Far Eastside as a trough moves over the region. These conditions warrant a somewhat marginal High Risk of significant fire designation there today. There will also be some gusty west winds this afternoon through The Delta region and nearby gap areas.

Some lighter but still gusty W to NW afternoon winds will develop Thursday as the trough moves into the Great Basin. High pressure will be strengthening over the Pacific right behind the trough Thursday night already, and this will lead to moderately strong, gusty N winds developing early Friday that will continue into Sunday that will generate hot temperatures (~100 Fri, ~107 Sat) and low RH (5-12%) in the Sacramento Valley/Foothills. Those conditions are enough to designate High Risk for that area Friday and Saturday. The event will be very similar to those that developed this past Friday/Saturday. The Mid Coast/Mendocino will also have the possibility of High Risk for Saturday, but that remains rather uncertain at the moment.

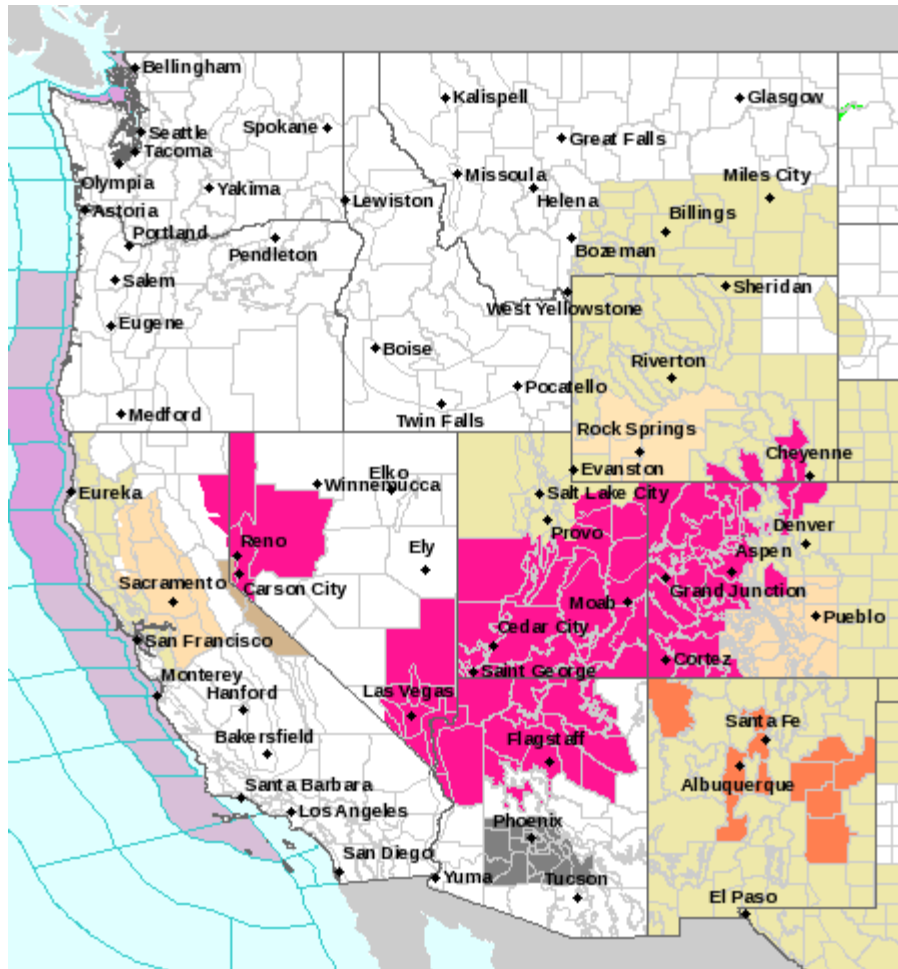

Winds will become much lighter in the Sacramento Valley Sunday, although hot, dry conditions will continue in all areas. Monday a trough is expected to move south over the region from out of the Pacific NW, and this will moderate temperatures and promote cooler onshore flow through the middle of next week. Areas with gusty afternoon westerly winds are likely to continue over the western areas of the Geographic Area at that time as well.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A trough will move into the Pacific Northwest today and will expand to cover much of the West Coast Thursday and Friday. Summer-like conditions will prevail across the region today with daytime highs in the mid-70s to mid-80s in the mountains, upper 80s to upper 90s in the valleys, and near 110 across the lower and eastern deserts. Temperatures will lower by 5 degrees or so Thursday and Friday as the approaching trough moves inland. The marine layer will deepen in the coming days with night and morning low clouds and fog becoming more prevalent in the coastal areas. In addition, onshore flow will strengthen with gusty southwest winds of 15-30 mph across the mountains and deserts, namely over the Tehachapi Range and across the Mojave. Moderate sea breezes can be expected along the coast during this same period, except for light to moderate Sundowner winds over the Santa Ynez Mountains during the next couple of nights. The cooler weather will be short lived as high pressure off the Pacific builds eastward toward California this weekend. Warmer and drier weather, along with lighter winds, can be expected for both Saturday and Sunday before a little cooler weather arrives early next week. Long range projections suggest the monsoon may make its debut by the middle to latter part of next week with the possibility of thunderstorms across the mountains and deserts by then.
